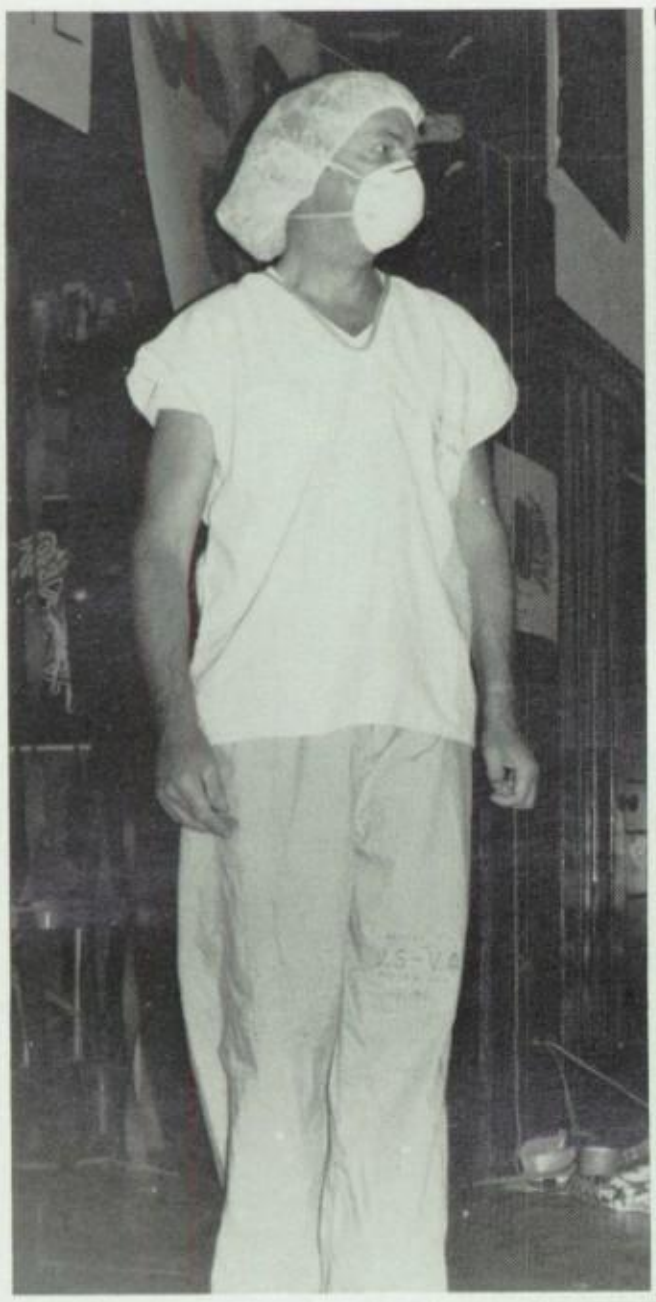
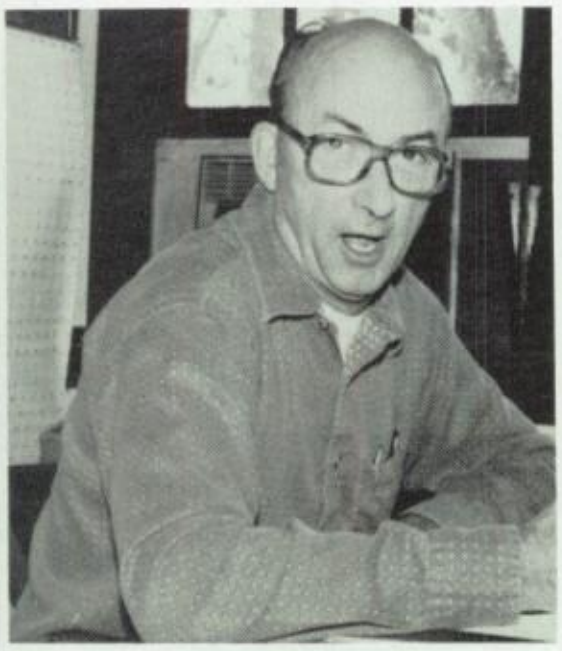
By their nature schools are a place of change. Most fundamentally they provide the environment in which students grow physically, intellectually and socially. As individuals become older and develop more skills they are expected to do more and to assume more responsibility. The pages of this yearbook display the wide age span of students who are served within Roycemore School. By reviewing the books of fourteen years we are reminded of the dramatic changes that an individual in the Class of 1983 has undergone.

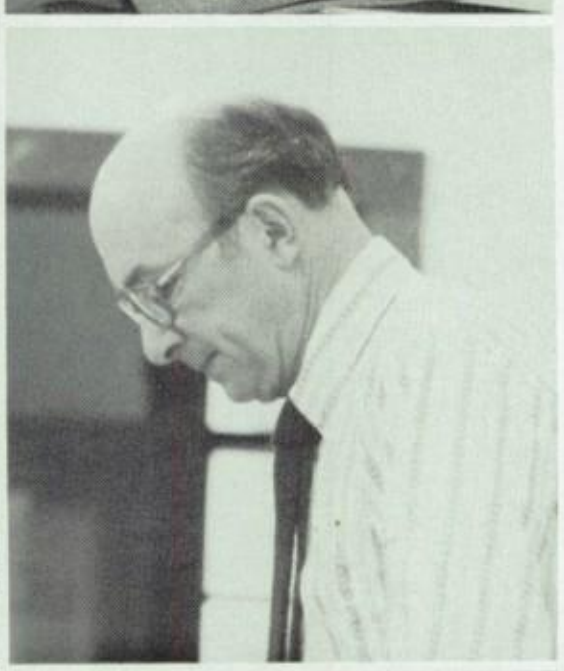
Not only do the students change, but so do the School and its staff. As society demands more and establishes different priorities, schools must respond. However, schools must also remain conscious of their tradition and heritage. Once again, the pages of this yearbook portray the way Roycemore responds to new educational challenges, while emphasizing its commitment to a personalized college preparatory program for each child. Certain traditions are maintained and cherished by all. Yet there is time to explore new areas and to meet new demands.

I trust that each member of the Roycemore community will include this volume in his personal library and will use it to measure the growth of individuals and of the School over a span of years. We truly hope the memories will be vivid and the pride abundant as an historical perspective is applied to our Roycemore School.

Joseph A. Becker
Headmaster







This book is created especially for George Eldredge, who is involved in every facet of the Roycemore community. His underlying dedication to Roycemore is not obvious at first glance. But he is a man who is immeasurably devoted. He is a leader to students and teachers alike. Because he cares so much for us, this makes us care for ourselves. He is the nucleus of the School.

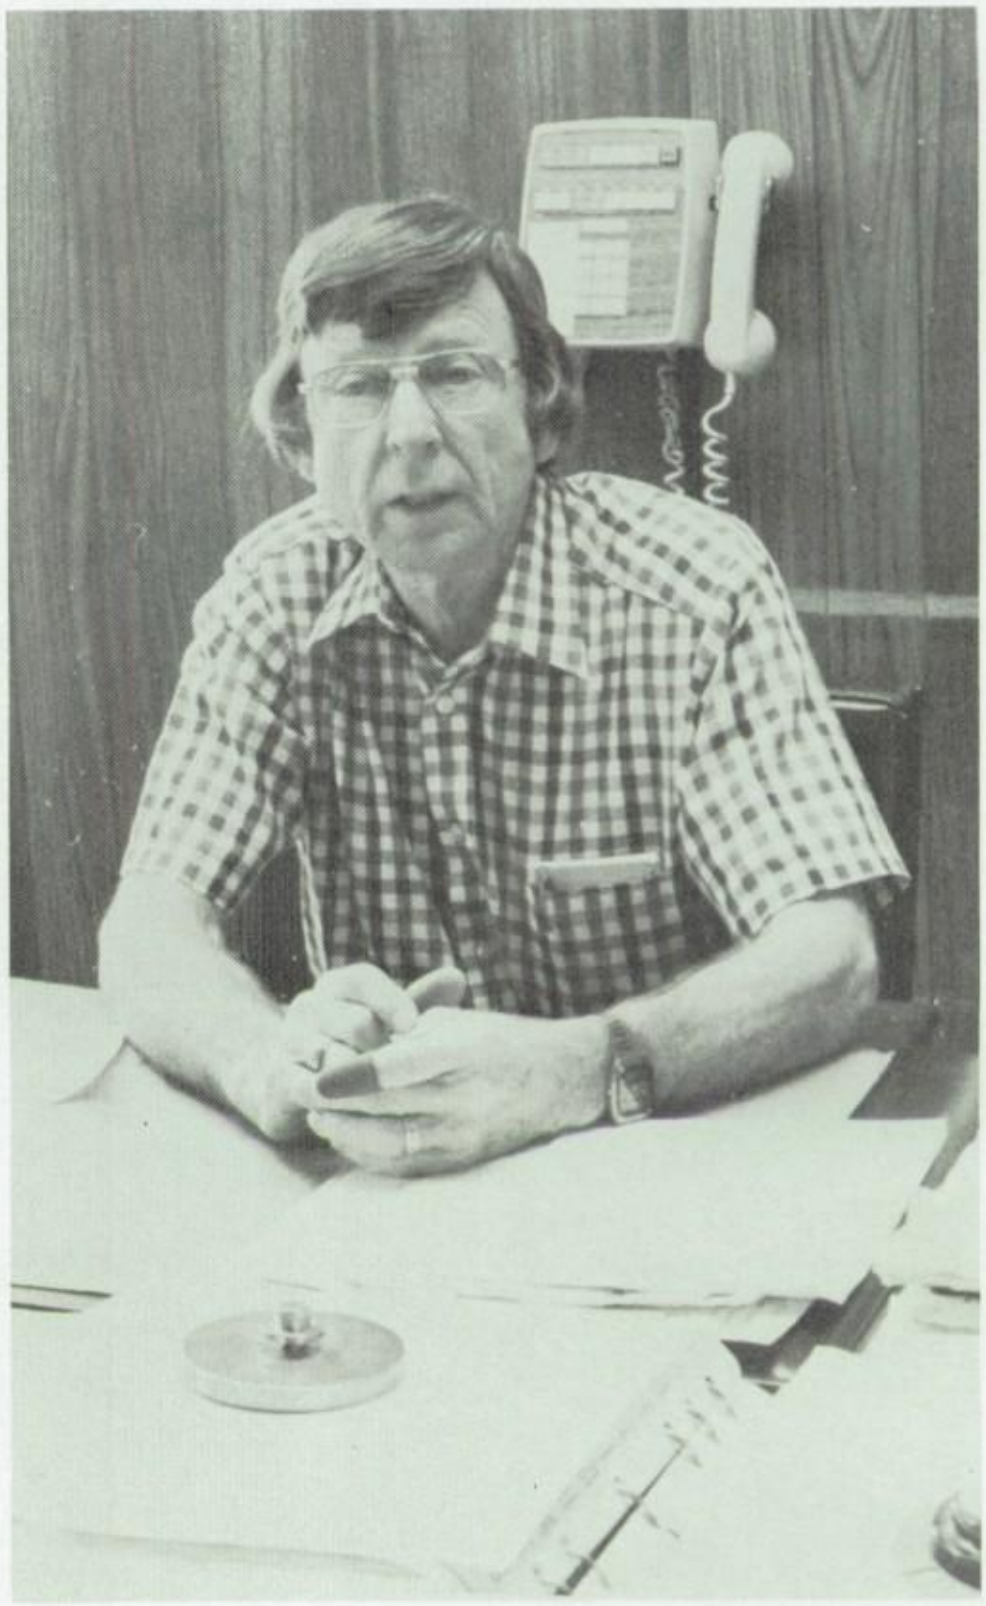
FAREWELL

Roycemore prides itself on its friendly environment. That ambience results from the special nature of the people who work and study here, and no one personifies this better than Ken Normile. Since February, 1959 Kenneth E. Normile has been an integral part of Roycemore School. During these many years virtually everyone associated with the school has had contact with him. Every aspect of the School has benefitted from Ken's involvement.



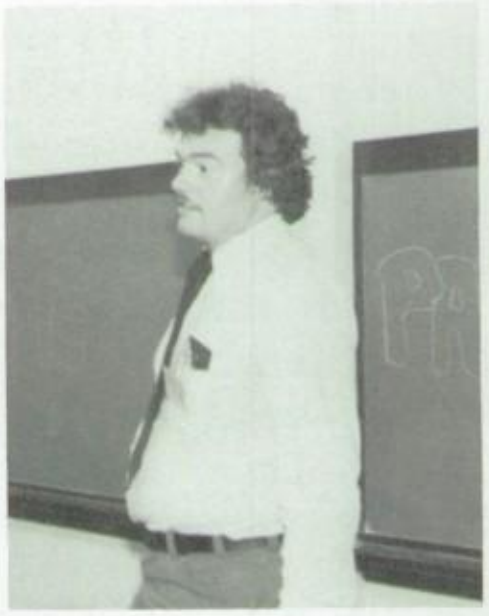
During these years Ken has watched the School change, has helped guide it through difficult and tumultuous times, and has always done what was necessary to help the School succeed. He has performed a multitude of tasks. His hours have been lengthy and his periods of rest limited. Whether he was sharing the joy with the small ones as a substitute for Santa Claus or coping with the consternation caused by stubborn busses on cold and stormy days, Ken showed his warmth and efficiency.

While his title has been Business Manager, we know him as a friend and confidant. His dedication to Roycemore — its students, parents, faculty, trustees, alumni, and friends — is without parallel; his commitment to excellence sets a standard for all to seek; his personal energy are a model for us all.

We thank Ken Normile for all he has done on behalf of Roycemore School and wish him much happiness in his retirement.

MINIATURE SCHOOL

One night in October the parents enter the school knowing they are going to like all the teachers, knowing they can't possibly get lost in so small a building, and knowing their child's attitude toward school is positive and enthusiastic. Three hours later they leave the school by a door they earlier did not suspect existed, trying to absorb the values the teachers have been trying to convey and carrying a fuller understanding of the day their children experience.



I S A C S AWARD

This year Frank Spica, chairman of Math and Science Departments, was honored by the Independent Schools of the Central States as one of three outstanding teachers in the midwest. Chosen from among more than five thousand teachers, he was commended for his laboratory science program, his participation in extra-curricular activities, and his enduring and sincere interest in the well-being of his students. In so honoring this veteran teacher, ISACS affirms what the school has long known: he is a mainstay in the effort of the school to provide quality education.

CARNIVAL

Here is a noisy, fancifully attired melange of all ages, jostling each other under orange and black streamers. There are games of chance and skill, prizes of candy, mice, and free tickets. The costume contest features a teacher who is a Christmas elf, a senior who is a pink rabbit, and a little girl who is Leia Organa come to life. There is an orange tent where the fortune teller lurks to tell you your future, with all the tools at her command. Here is a magical make-up booth where faces are turned into clownish masks. Over there candy, cakes, cokes, and all things yummy. Travel an inhospitable land to the terrifying house of horrors, if you dare! Carnival is a wonderland of magic and fun for a day.

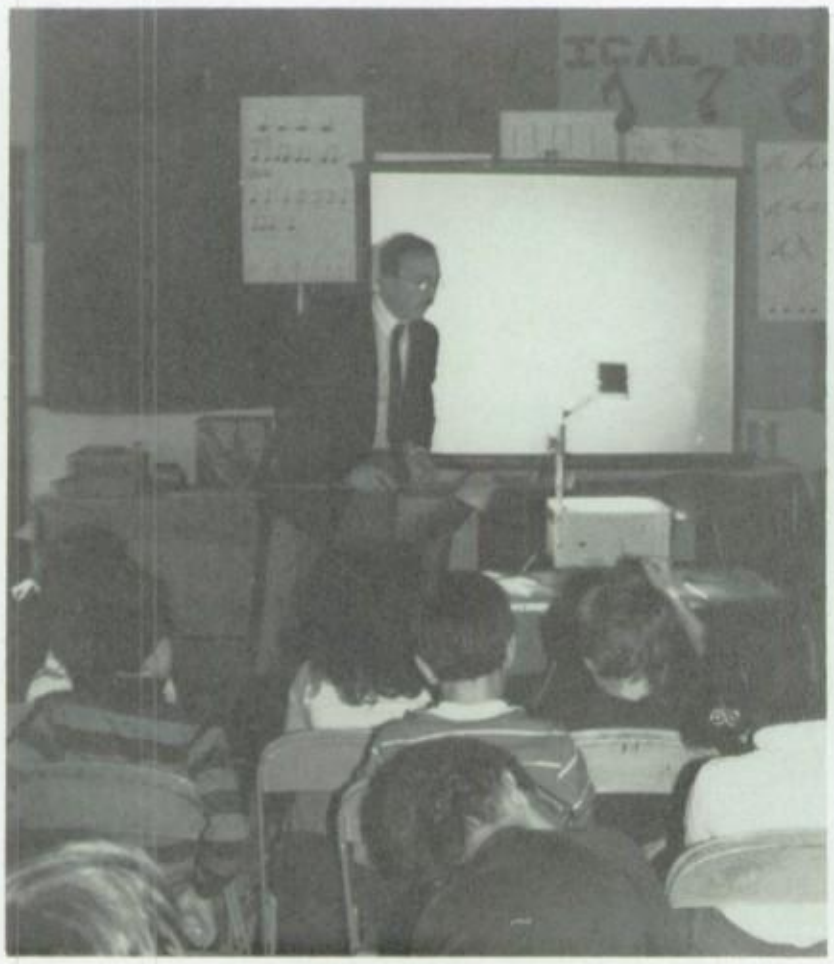
Early in the school year Ronald McDonald brought a fire safety program to us, teaching students to "Stop, drop, and roll" If ever caught in a fire.

SPLASH PARTY

In October Lower School students and their parents met the staff at the Evanston YWCA for an evening of swimming and socializing. New families had the opportunity to meet their children's teachers and other parents, those returning renewed friendships, and the newest members of the Roycemore community, the babies, made their social debuts.



Metin Ger, parent of Ali and Baris Ger, talks about watercycles.

COMPLETELY TAPE

LITTLE ROY

Little Roy is the Middle School newspaper. Our main goal is to entertain our readers. This isn't always easy. For instance, we have to write all our stories making sure that the spelling and grammar are correct. We make over 100 copies per issue. Each copy averages about six to ten pages. We write about sports, school events, and other news. We sometimes make puzzles and draw pictures. We interview people, even the Headmaster. We also write copy for the Griffin, and we hardly ever tell a lie. We ask people what they like about Little Roy; it is all a team effort.

The Island

Why, Oh Why does the summer die
On the mainland, Oh, so drear?
On my island, Why, the birds don't fly
As the winter began to draw near.

I love to lie while the palm trees sway
And fish in the ocean so cool
And stay til the end of the day
With no troubles like the mainland fool!

When their winter comes, I'm still in the sun
While the fools buy coats, Oh so heavy
Next summer will be fun for them in the sun
But I'm living next summer already.

I look up at the stars, no pollution or cars
While they strain to see the moon
Why, I can even see to Mars
As they live in all that gloom.

Their machines are monstrosity
They hear not the loon
As they head with increasing velocity
To their doom.

I don't have to work
On my island of rest
And no others may lurk
For my island is best.

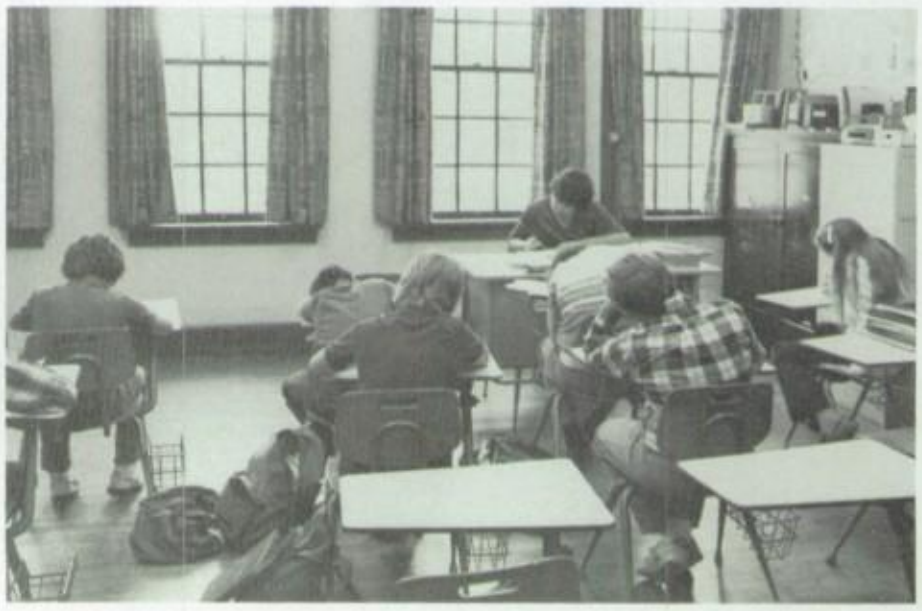
THE WRITE A WAY



Friday, September 24, the third annual Write A Way took place in Roycemore's Middle School. All 76 fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth graders participated. The week before they had collected pledges for each word, sentence, and paragraph they would write. On Friday they wrote while they were in their English classes; they wrote all class period to their heart's content. After they were done writing, their English teachers counted words, sentences, and paragraphs, and then the students collected the money from their sponsors. The winners for the most pledges collected, below, are: Row 1: Jeff Stein, Becca Silva, Susan Hirsch, John Oppenheimer; Row 2: Sponsors: Joseph A. Becker, Toni Levine, Kim Hren, Josephine Green

. . . It is in these circumstances most especially, that individuals, instead of being deterred, should be encouraged in acting differently from the mass. In other times there was no advantage in their doing so, unless they acted not only differently, but better. In this age, the mere example of nonconformity, the mere refusal to bend the knee to custom, is itself a service. WRITE!

is a magazine, a forum for aspiring writers; "Everyone has something to say," is perhaps its message. Everyone seems to submit something at one time or another, and in only three years it has become a school tradition. Everyone is on the staff, everyone writes, everyone reads it — this is how we talk to each other.

He sits around and watches
Life go by
He is used to many things
Some things he does not know
Nothing matters
And he has nothing
To look forward to
To him, tomorrow is just Another yesterday
He is just a bum
And no one cares
Where he will sleep
Tonight.

When he finally does
He will wake up and
Watch it happen
All over again
Repetitive
Day after day
Old things and
New ones that Become regular
Tomorrow holds
Something
That someone
Is looking for.

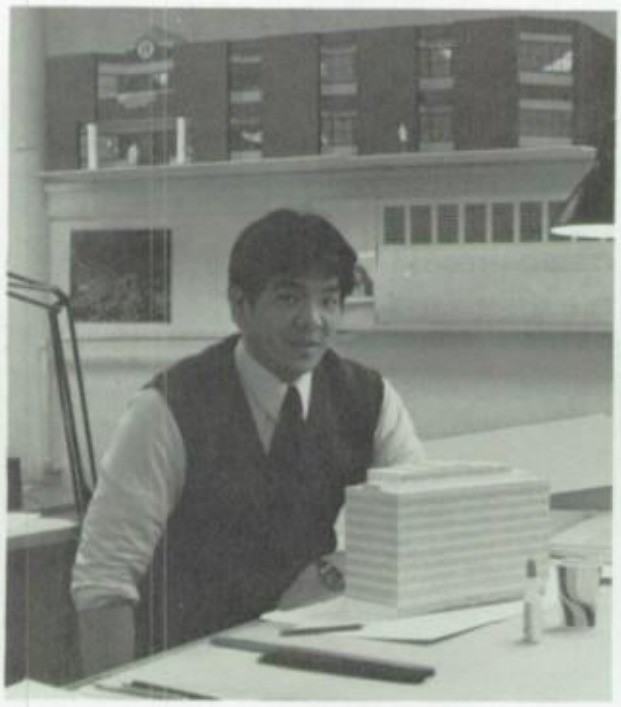
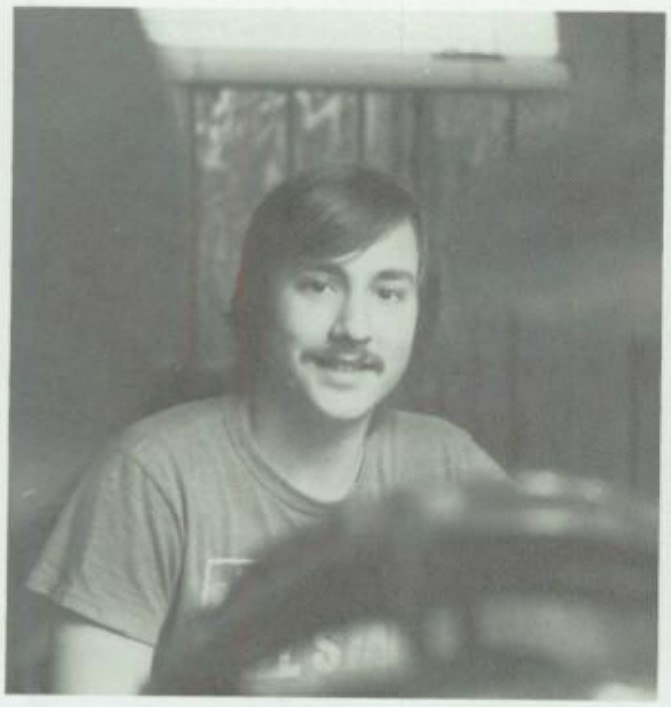
JANUARY SHORT TERM

Every year Libby Hill (above) and the January Short Term Committee help the students of the Upper School define an area of personal interest to explore during the interim between first and second semesters. This year more than half the students worked off campus, learning about the working world. The remaining worked in groups such as the Law and Justice course or on independently designed projects that met specific needs. Clockwise, from above right: Ellen Newburger learned about retail sales; Jennifer Faberson helped teach developmentally handicapped students; Kira McCaffrey, Elliot Benn, and Ted Maclean were runners for the Mercantile Exchange; Anucha Pingkarawat built architectural models; Jenny Schwartzberg taught herself how to use the computer; and Steve Halas aided the Public Administrator's Office.





Other projects ranged from Louis Ferrigno's polishing his drummer's skills to Erica Levin's window work at Carson Pirie Scott. Edye Richard was part of Pet Pals, which became an on-going project for the School, Steve Van Ryzin and Jamie Newman worked at Lincoln Park Zoo, while Naomi Saks collated information for the Illinois Public Action Council.

SPORTS AT ROYCEMORE

Thou hadst not used thy hand for support of sport in Roycemore. Ay, marry! Would thou had. I weep and deny thee for a brother. Thou shouldst be cleft in twain by my parting sword. - William Shakespeare

CONGRATULATIONS! LOUIE FERIGNO
1983 GRADUATE

Louie,

We love you as parents,
We are proud of you as a son,
We believe in you as a person,
We know that —
When you did ask-you received
When you did seek- you found
When you did knock- the door was opened
We know that you did accomplish that in which you set out to do
During the hard times you didn't give up
During the good times you didn't become
Over-confident and prideful
We have faith that as you move forward into the future, you will do likewise in your goals
As you reach out to others, do so in spirit and truth
Put your hope and your trust in the Lord; He will make your burden light and your yoke easy
Let His light keep shining in your heart and He will guide you straight in your path
Remember: Heaven and earth will pass away,
but His word will remain forever.

WHEN I HEARD THE LEARN'D ASTRONOMER
WHEN THE PROOFS, THE FIGURES, WERE RANGED IN COLUMNS BEFORE ME, WHEN I WAS SHOWN THE CHARTS AND DIAGRAMS, TO ADD, DIVIDE, & MEASURE THEM, WHEN I, SITTING, HEARD THE ASTRONOMER WHERE HE LECTURED WITH MUCH APPLAUSE
HOW SOON UNACCOUNTABLE I BECAME SICK AND TIRED,
'TILL RISING AND GLIDING, OUT I WANDER'D OFF BY MYSELF.
IN THE MYSTICAL MOIST NIGHT-AIR, AND FROM TIME TO TIME, LOOK'D UP IN PERFECT SILENCE AT THE STARS.
— WALT WHITMAN
